FIGHT IS ON MONDAY

Now Famous Cameron Mining Claim Suit Will be Argued in all Its Phases in U. S. Court

Motions and counter motions will be argued in federal court Monday, when the attorneys for the United States and and Judge Stanford Ex- those of Ralph Cameron get up to resume the litigation over the now famous disputed mining claims in and near the Grand Canyon.

The case of the Cameron interests suing for an injunction to restrain the land office from hearing a contest against seventeen mining claims, after having been in federal court off and on since a month ago, will now come up to be argued on all its phases. Technically, the motions to be debated before Judge Sawtelle are: 1. Government's motion to strike out the name of Commissioner Clay Tallman of the general land office as one of the defendants; 2 Cameron's motion to strike government's affidavits touching the right of the land office to take juris diction in the hearing, and 3. Governnent's motion to deny the injunction. In addition, there is a totally separate
